SCHOOL OF CLINICAL MEDICINE

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
 TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

International Medical Undergraduate Program
 (English-Taught Undergraduate Medical Program)

Program Quality

According to the "Provisional Regulations on Quality Control Standards of English-Taught Medical Undergraduate Education for International Students in China", the Ministry of Education of China has approved Fudan University as one of thirty universities in China permitted to enroll international students in English-taught undergraduate programs in medicine.

To promote international education, Fudan University began enrolling international students in the English-taught undergraduate medical program in Fall 2008. The program aims to produce high-caliber medical graduates with solid medical knowledge, competent clinical skills, and professionalism, while giving due consideration to the possible needs for them to serve in countries outside of China. Graduates of the program will have the ability to work in medical and health institutions, making meaningful contributions to the areas of patient care, education, and research.

The program is taught completely in English and follows the principles of consolidating academic knowledge, with emphasis on technical skills, interdisciplinary studies, and clinical practice.

Offered by the Shanghai Medical College of Fudan University, this program is open to international students intending to pursue the science and practice of medicine. Students who excel will have the opportunity to participate in overseas clinical internship programs. After completing the required number of credits, students will be conferred a diploma from Fudan University, and qualified students will receive a degree of Bachelor of Medicine and the Bachelor of Surgery (MBBS). Graduates will have the opportunity to register for medical licensing exams in accordance with the requirements of the relevant regulatory bodies of the countries in which they choose to practice.

DEPARTMENT OF CHINESE LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

English-Instructed MA Program in Chinese Language and Culture

Academic Year: 2016-2017

Basic Information

Chinese Language and Culture is an English-Instructed MA program supported by the faculty of Chinese Language and Literature (FCLL), which aims at training students to know the basic theories of Chinese language in certain degree, improving students' ability of communication in Chinese, and making international students deeply comprehend Chinese traditional culture and know the status of contemporary culture deeply. By the academic training, this program will be committed to developing international talents proficient in Chinese culture to help them understand China.

FCLL academic staff has earned national and international recognition for their research into Chinese culture, literature and language. In class they will introduce a multi-dimensional China to you via their professional, innovative and experienced teaching. Besides classroom teaching, here at FCLL our students have opportunities for daily conversation with Chinese students in the department, home stays at Chinese professor's homes, casual dinners with successful Chinese business men and a chance to meet people of different backgrounds on our weekend outings to places of cultural and historical interest.

Candidates of the EMA program in Chinese Language and Culture come from a wide range of countries, including French, Sweden, Switzerland, Britain, Estonia, USA, Mexico, Russia, Singapore, Japan, Thailand, Indonesia and so on. Currently there are six classes graduated from the program. Some of the graduates chose to get further education back to their home countries or in China, and the others chose to work in China and have got good opportunities here.

Application Requirements

a. TOEFL or IELTS scores

Bachelor's Degree

Chinese Language and Culture

This course introduces the basic speech sounds, grammar, social factors, dialects etc. of the Chinese language and a selection of important topics of Chinese culture such as beliefs, art, education, food, festivals etc. It is not assumed that students know the Chinese language; however, they will be required to try to analyze some basic Chinese language data and discuss cultural issues in classroom together with the teacher. Also, students need to take the open-book final exam on Chinese language, and to give a presentation on one topic of Chinese culture or cultural comparison.

Chinese Arts

This course involves a survey of Chinese arts, in both of its ancient and contemporary forms, such as painted pottery, bronze vessel, painting, calligraphy, and film. Emphases will be given on the inner spirits of the relationship between Chinese arts and Chinese philosophy. Since often mythology coins a nation's cultural identity, even if in the unconscious level, the course will start its journey from Chinese mythology. The first part of this course will mainly discuss Chinese painting to show how the transcendental as well as secular spirits intertwine the life of Chinese intellectuals.

Considering we live in an age of globalization and consumer society, however, contemporary Chinese popular culture will also be discussed among which the re-mapping of urban space will be a major topic. By "French Theory in China," this course will trace its Chinese reception back to the happy 1980s when China was benefited from "open policy" and began to embrace Western culture through their "Americanization." Nevertheless, French theory is not a version of Parisian fashion, of which only the newest be appreciated. Since late 1990s, cultural studies of CCCS have become a new hegemonic discourse in its Chinese context. The course will display how Chinese academic fervency transmits from "theory" to "culture" finally.

Contemporary Pop Culture in China

Chinese popular culture cannot be properly grasped without the immersion study of what ordinary Chinese people thought, felt, believed, and acted. We will take a generic approach, asking the basic question of what the Chinese people do with their typical forms of popular culture, such as lifestyles, popular literature, film, television, music, opera, food, religion, internet life, etc. We will exam these forms of popular culture primarily from the perspective of their political, ideological, sociological, cultural, and psychological functions. The seminar will focus on 1990s and 2000s PRC popular culture. These subjects will be approached through both written and visual documentation. Students will be expected to do field trips and perform local investigations on the Chinese environment in addition to the weekly readings and discussions.

Ancient Chinese Culture and Tradition

The course gives a brief survey of ancient Chinese culture and tradition, including the natural and human environment, political history, religious beliefs, literature, and idea systems. It also gives some discussions on both external and internal narratives which were often shaped and overstated as Chinese cultural characters and traditions. As kinds of recognitions of Chinese cultural identity, some ancient texts are perused, and some orthodox perspectives and subtle details from beginning through recent time are questioned; in the meantime, some other views from neighboring people and western world are argued and treated with some respect in the reasonable evaluation system. The students who take this course should have comparative perspective and balanced judgment, and are always willing to understand China with the calm and relational eyes.

Chinese Literature in the 20th Century

This course will focus on the study of Chinese novel\poetry\drama in different styles in the 20th century, and some leading Chinese writers will be read in the class , including Lu Xun, Yu Dafu, Mao Dun, Ba Jin, Lao She, Cao Yu, Shen Congwen, Mo Yan, Su Tong, Yu Hua, Wang Anyi etc.

The Introduction to Chinese Newspapers

This graduate level course is designed to introduce the history, theory and practice of contemporary Chinese newspapers. Topics including the legacy of Chinese newspapers, relevant media policies and regulations, the commercialization of Chinese newspapers, working patterns for different news genres and media professionalism will be addressed. The course focuses on discussing the developments and challenges for Chinese journalism within a society undergoing a profound transformation. This course will be conducted with lectures, seminars, presentations and discussions.

Tuition Fee: RMB25,000

DEPARTMENT OF HISTORY

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

Faculty of Education, Shanghai Normal University

Programme

The EMA in Chinese History and Culture is a two-year study program which aims to provide opportunity for international students without prior knowledge of the Chinese language to study Chinese history toward a Master's degree in Shanghai, one of the most exciting cities in China. All courses except Chinese language courses under the program are taught in English by our highly qualified faculty.

Courses in the program consist of three blocks:

- 1) Chinese language courses for different levels;
- 2) general surveys of ancient and modern Chinese history;
- 3) in-depth research courses focusing on art and religion in ancient China, history and culture of Shanghai, comparative perspectives on Chinese and other ancient civilizations.

For those who are able to follow courses in Chinese they can also choose from a wide range of courses taught in our department. Students in the program will have a unique opportunity to studying Chinese history and culture while experiencing it in person.

Degree and Non-Degree Studies

For students who pursue a Master's degree, a minimum of two years is generally required in order to complete the program. They will be required to complete a total of thirty-one course credits and a dissertation written in English of no fewer than 10,000 words. The dissertation should be defended successfully before being submitted with an abstract in Chinese.

While developed mainly to fulfill requirements for a Master's degree, our program also accommodates for those who wish to follow our courses for any length of period from one semester onwards with no intention of obtaining a degree.

Once admitted, every student, degree or non-degree, may choose a faculty as his or her supervisor according to his or her research interest with the help of our EMA coordinator.

Courses: A degree student is required to complete requires students to complete thirty-one credits (including eight credits for Chinese language courses, twenty credits in history and culture and three credits for academic activities) during two academic years and successfully defend their Master thesis. He or she may make a course plan with the help of his or her supervisor.

Non-degree students may take courses in the light of requirements in their home institutions.

The main courses in our EMA program include:

Elementary Chinese	4 credits	Religion and Society in China	3 credits

SCHOOL OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

Doctoral Program in International Politics (DPIP)
School of International Relations and Public Affairs, Fudan University, Shanghai, China

International Master of Science in Public Affairs (SIRPA)

Fudan University is a comprehensive university located in Shanghai, China's most internationalized metropolitan city. It is a top university in the world, ranked at the 88th place in the QS World University Rankings (2013/14). Its campus hosts the biggest group of foreign students in China.

The School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA) is a leading school in political and public affairs. Its Political Science and International Relations (including its public management) was ranked by QS ranging from the 40th to the 19th in the world over the past years. Supported by its interdisciplinary structure, strong international publications and exchanges, faculty resources and frontier research, SIRPA has been running several English-taught MA programs, including Chinese Politics and Diplomacy, Europe and Asia in Global Affairs (double degree with Science Po Paris), Chinese Government and Governance, Comparative Politics and international public policy, as well as one English-taught Ph.D. program in International Politics.

International Master of Science in Global Affairs

SIRPA has newly established an English-instructed Doctoral Program in International Politics. The principal goal of the program is preparing scholars and practitioners with a solid theoretical foundation, rigorous research skills, and profound knowledge of both history and contemporary issues in the vitally important fields of public and international affairs. The program mainly enrolls foreign students, and all its academic courses are taught in English. The curriculum and doctoral dissertation work in the program center around the following thematic areas: International Relations Theory, History of International Relations, Great-power Diplomacy, Chinese Foreign Policy, International Organization, Comparative Politics, BRICS Study, International Political Economy, Global Governance, International Security and Religion, etc.

Applicants should have master's degrees in related fields. The Doctoral Program in International Politics normally requires three to four years of work on courses and dissertation. The faculty members have diverse academic backgrounds, and many of them received their Ph.D. degrees abroad.

Application

Core Courses

International Politics and Theories

This is a required course for students in the Doctoral Program in International Politics. This course is designed to assist students in acquiring knowledge about international politics and theories. The goal of the course is to provide students with a thorough understanding of international politics from both theoretical and factual perspectives. It will mainly focus on contending theories, i.e., different theoretical perspectives, on international relations (IR). Students are required to not only understand various IR theories, as well as their relations, but also employ those theories to describe and explain international events.

Research Methods for Political Science

This is a required course for students in the program. It offers an in-depth introduction to both quantitative and qualitative research methods in political science. It is designed to equip students with knowledge and techniques for reading scholarly articles and conducting their own academic research. The course introduces the general principles for conducting political science research, some practical techniques for writing research proposals and research papers at Fudan University, and the major research methods for political science.

Political Development in Modern China

This course strives to capture the continuous drama of the Chinese struggle for national revival through political, social and economic modernization. It deals with fundamental questions as why China went communist in time of national crisis since mid-19th century; how the PRC regime tried to industrialize the economy and society through state mobilization in 50s and 60s; how that mobilization model ran into a dead end at the end of 70s; and finally how the market oriented reforms and opening up to the outside world in the past 30 years have transformed the socio-economics and the state-society relations in today's China.

Chinese Diplomacy

This course provides students with a comprehensive introduction to contemporary China's diplomacy and its foreign policy, as well as their theoretical and historical background. This course will also investigate the decision-making system of Chinese foreign policy, China's bilateral relations with major powers, China's multilateral relations with its neighboring countries, developing countries and international organizations. Emphasis will be placed on the period since 1978 when China entered its reform and opening-up era.

中国政治外交学术项目

Chinese Politics and Diplomacy (CPD) is a two-year international master program that prepares students with theoretical toolkits, practical knowledge and analytical capacity of Chinese politics and international relations. Taught by established professors and seasoned policy experts with global vision, the program distinguishes itself by its wide array of courses, unique academic atmosphere and first-hand observation of Chinese politics and policies. Students are expected to leave the program with considerable exposure to Chinese state institutions, political culture and diplomatic practices. Upon graduation, they can pursue further training in prestigious academic programs, as well as advance careers in a wide range of public and private institutions around the globe, including national governments, international organizations, transnational corporations, think-tanks and NGOs.

Starting from 2005, CPD has established itself as one of the most prestigious English-taught graduate-level programs both at home and abroad. We accept both degree and non-degree students on a competitive basis. Throughout the decade, hundreds of international students have graduated from CPD program, who are now working as diplomats, government officials, private managers and other professionals. Besides, the program also offers a great opportunity for exchange or non-degree students to experience Chinese culture and politics.

International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA)

Fudan University is a comprehensive university located in Shanghai, China's most internationalized metropolitan city. It is a top university in the world, ranked at the 88th place in the QS World University Rankings (2013/14). Its campus hosts the biggest group of foreign students in China.

The School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA) is a leading school in political and public affairs. Its Political Science and International Relations (including its public management) was ranked by QS ranging from the 40th to the 19th in the world over the past years. Supported by its interdisciplinary structure, strong international publications and exchanges, faculty resources and frontier research, SIRPA has been running several English-taught MA programs, including Chinese Politics and Diplomacy, Europe and Asia in Global Affairs (double degree with Science Po Paris), Chinese Government and Governance, Comparative Politics and international public policy, as well as one English-taught Ph.D. program in International Politics.

Master in Comparative Politics (MCP)

Master in Comparative Politics (MCP) is a two-year international master program that prepares students to familiarize and analyze various politics around the globe from a comparative perspective. Taught by renowned comparativists and area specialists from Fudan and possibly other prestigious universities, this program offers theoretical resources, analytical skills and practical knowledge not only of Chinese politics, but also of major countries in North and South. Students are expected to finish the program with cross-national insights on 1) state organizations and political institutions; 2) political culture; 3) process and major actors of state governance. This program distinguishes itself by offering an invaluable research perspective to understand the world from China's vintage point and observe how China is interacting with the world. Students of this program can pursue a variety of potential careers, including doctoral-level training, national governments, think-tanks, international organizations and corporations.

Admission

Both degree and non-degree students are admitted to this program.

International Management of SIRPA

Fudan University is a comprehensive university based in Shanghai, China's most internationalized metropolitan city. It is a top university in the world, ranked at the 88th place in the QS World University Rankings (2013/14). Its campus hosts the biggest group of foreign students in China.

The School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA) is a leading school in political and public affairs. Its Political Science and International Relations (including its public management) was ranked by QS ranging from the 40th to the 19th in the world over the past years. Supported by its interdisciplinary structure, strong international publications and exchanges, faculty resources and frontier research, SIRPA has been running several English-taught MA programs, including Chinese Politics and Diplomacy, Europe and Asia in Global Affairs (double degree with Science Po Paris), Chinese Government and Governance, Comparative Politics and international public policy, as well as one English-taught Ph.D. program in International Politics.

International Management of IGA

In response to the demand for policy analysts and practitioners with an international vision, SIRPA builds a two-year MA program in International Public Policy (IPP). This program combines multiple strengths. First, China, after decades of rapid development, is now the world's second largest economy. Besides proliferating domestic demands for policy experts, China has also been an active partner in global public affairs. Second, Shanghai is China's economic capital and a vibrant global city. It has China's first Free Trade Zone and will accommodate the headquarter of BRICS Development Bank.

The IPP program welcomes students with diverse academic background such as social sciences, natural sciences, and engineering, among others. The program emphasizes strong analytical capacities, quantitative skills, policy orientation, and an international vision. The training in IPP will prepare students for leadership and analytical positions in public, private, and nonprofits organizations in or out of China. It also sets solid foundation for further Ph.D. studies.

Highlights of the program

- (A) All courses except the Chinese language courses are taught in English.
There are some distance learning courses co-organized with our international partners.
- (B) Most faculty members are Chinese with a Ph.D. degree from the west. There are also foreign faculty members.
- (C) The program is composed of half international students and half Chinese students.
- (D) Courses are designed with an interdisciplinary focus and a methodology focus.
- (E) Internship in local or foreign agencies is important for developing a policy design or a thesis.
- (F) Ample opportunities for international exchanges including double degree programs.

Training goals for students

- Grasp basic skills of policy analysis and program evaluation and have a solid knowledge of social science research methods.
- Have considerable understanding of certain issues in international public policy and can systematically analyze domestic and international public policies.
- Can independently carry out academic research and write professional articles and consulting reports.
- Have strong abilities to research and write on policy issues and to design and propose recommendations.

Admission

The program admits both degree and non-degree students.
For application procedures, please refer to the notice of International Students Office of Fudan University

- Resume
- Statement of purpose

Admission Schedule

Degree students are admitted for fall semester only. The application deadline for 2016 academic year is April 30, 2016.
Non-degree students are admitted for both fall and spring semesters. Applications should be submitted by May 30, 2016 for the 2016 fall semester and by Nov 30, 2016 for the 2017 spring semester.

Degree and Non-degree

A master in Management Science with a major of Public Policy will be awarded.
The term is 2 years. Students can apply to extend the studies, with a maximum of 5 years for graduation purpose. Extended semesters students will pay regular tuition each year.
30 credits minimum are required for graduation purpose. Students must pass all courses taken and have a GPA above 2.0. The credits should include 15 credits from mandatory courses, 8 credits from elective courses (category I) and 7 credits (category II).
Students are required to complete and defend a graduation thesis or policy design. With the consent of the advisor, students can choose either write graduation thesis or policy design. Graduation thesis is for students interested in further academic study after graduation, and the requirements are the same as those for a MA degree. Policy design is mainly for students interested in entering a certain policy area after graduation. Students who do a policy design are required to do internship for a policy issue and use the policy design to analyze the policy issues in depth and raise policy suggestions.
Students must meet all other requirements for graduation.

Introduction

The Double Degree Program on Europe and Asia in Global Affairs was established by Fudan University and Sciences Po in 2010. It provides students who are interested in analyzing European and Asian studies from both comparative and international relations perspectives with the excellent research network between SCIENCES PO and Fudan University.

This program is aimed, at the same time, at European specialists who would like to deepen their understanding of Europe through comparing it to Asia, at Asian specialists who aspire to strengthen their understanding of Asia in relation to other regions, at International relations specialists eager to acquire a more specific insight on the challenges and content of Europe-Asia relations.

Admission

Candidates should apply directly via the Sciences Po web-site. <http://admissions.sciences-po.fr/>

Generally, applications must be completed by the end of March each year.

Applications are administered centrally at Sciences Po when they will be examined by a joint admissions board comprising representatives from both the School of International Relations and Public Affairs (SIRPA), Fudan University and Sciences Po. Applicants will be notified by email and post (for admitted students).

Financial Support

COURSE	CONTENTS
Microeconomics Li Dan, Associate Professor PhD, Boston University Credits: 3 Hours: 48	Economics is the study of how society deals with the problem of allocation of scarce resources across competing uses. Every economic system must answer a few central questions, e.g. what goods to produce, how much of each good to produce, how to produce them, who gets the goods, etc.
Macroeconomics Ge Jinfeng, Assistant Professor PhD, Stockholm University Credits: 3 Hours: 48	The level of this course is intermediate macroeconomics. Macroeconomists are interested to know how far the standard model can explain consumption, investment, unemployment, business cycle, economic growth, money demand ... A bit stretched perhaps, policy implications can be obtained based on relevant frameworks. In the end of the course, students are supposed to know how to solve basic models, and how to map from theory to reality.
International Macroeconomics Hu Xu, Assistant Professor PhD, Texas A&M University Credits: 3 Hours: 48	This course studies issues such as the balance of payments, real and nominal exchange rate determination, and macroeconomic policy in open economies.
FDI and International Trade Luo Changyuan, Associate Professor PhD, Vienna University of Economics and Business Administration Credits: 2 Hours: 32	This course will explore the motivation and effects of FDI in host countries. The contents consist of two parts, namely general topics and special issues. As for the part of general topics, we will investigate FDI's role in economic growth and technological progress. As for the part of special issues, we will focus on inward and outward FDI in China. In this part, the first 5 sessions will discuss facts and effects of inward FDI in China. The last session will turn to outward FDI in China.
Industrial Organization Zhou Yu, Assistant Professor PhD, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor Credits: 3 Hours: 48	The purpose of this course is to expose students to topics and techniques frequently discussed in Industrial Organization Literature. The first half will cover demand, supply, entry and matching. The second half will cover single-agent dynamics and market dynamics.
Development Economics Liu Yu, Assistant Professor PhD, Yale University Credits: 3 Hours: 48	The course covers some of the central issues in recent development economics literature and introduces a variety of methodological approaches to study these issues. It draws on a broad range of research papers and emphasizes particularly on their empirical methods. The goal of this course is to transform students into researchers who can conduct independent projects related to economic development.
Nationalism and Development Lan Xiaohan, Assistant Professor PhD, University of Virginia Credits: 3 Hours: 48	This course includes 16-18 lectures. We will discuss some economic theories and empirical evidence on nation and state, government, and bureaucracy, in order to understand the conflict and balance of interests on different levels. Then these theories are confronted with China's history and current affair.

COURSE	CONTENTS
Advanced Topics in Economic Theory Zhang Jun, Professor, Dean PhD, Fudan University And Other Guest Professors Credits: 2 Hours: 32	The objective of the course is to make students understand China's economic transition and development, focusing on the role of government as well as the markets. The course runs for sixteen weeks with sixteen topics in Fall semester and has two academic hours every week.
Urbanization in China Wang Zhi, Assistant Professor PhD, Brown University Credits: 3 Hours: 48	The goal of this course is to give students an understanding of how to apply the latest thinking and research in economics to analyze a series of topics related to urbanization in China.

SCHOOL OF SOCIAL DEVELOPMENT AND PUBLIC POLICY

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

FDU Master of Science in Public Policy and Management

PROGRAMME DESCRIPTION

About a fifth of all the people in the world live in China. At the same time as China has the longest continuous culture surviving from ancient times, globalisation widely affects Chinese culture and society. And as a country, China will have big influence in the politics and economics of the twenty-first century. Chinese culture and society is undergoing dramatic changes in the era of globalisation and transformation.

English-instructed Master Program in Chinese Society and Public Policy (EMA) provides an excellent opportunity of studying the Chinese society for foreign individuals without sufficient preparation in Chinese. This program is designed with a special purpose to serve the increasing international attention to and research interests in the recent rapid development of China in diverse aspects of Chinese society. To overcome the entry barrier due to the unfamiliarity with Chinese, all courses are taught in English. Our mission is to enhance both the students' analytical skills and their knowledge of China, with a purpose to establish a foundation for their future academic study or for their future professional career.

APPLICATION REQUIRED MATERIALS

All documents must be prepared in either Chinese or English:

- Fudan fill-out application form, together with signature and photograph
- One regular passport photocopy (personal information page-passport validity must be adequate for study).
- Original graduation certificates or documents proving students status at current university (notarized photocopies are accepted). Certificates or documents in languages other than Chinese or English must be translated and notarized.
- The original or notarized photocopies of corresponding transcripts. The transcripts in languages other than Chinese or English must be translated and notarized.
- One detailed study outline
- One TOEFL (90 points or above) or IELTS (6.5 or above) certificate photocopy, or other materials proving a corresponding level of English.

* Applicants must provide notarised copies of their diplomas and transcripts in either Chinese or English. If necessary, university will require applicants to submit extra materials.

APPLICATION DEADLINE

Spring Semester: Before October of pervious year

Autumn Semester (Sep): Before April

DURATION

Depending on the different demands of students, English-instructed Master Program in Chinese Society and Public Policy (EMA) can be either semester course or degree course.

In terms of degree students, EMA consists of a two-year full-time course study. The first year of the program is designed to provide a solid grounding in Chinese culture, society and issues of social development. The third semester of the program provides research opportunity on China. Master students are required to complete and defend an MA thesis.

In terms of non-degree students, EMA can be a good 1-2 semester programme. It will allow students to have the opportunity to not only study Mandarin and experience Chinese culture and local people, but collect credits from courses on postgraduate level at one of the top universities in Asia.

SOFTWARE SCHOOL OF FUDAN UNIVERSITY

POSTGRADUATE PROGRAMS
TAUGHT IN ENGLISH 2016

Master Degree Programme of Fudan University - College of Software Engineering (UCD)
MSc Software Engineering (Professional Master Degree)

Fudan University

The Software School of Fudan University, founded in 2002, is one of the original 37 national demonstration software schools. By design, the school is to cater to the needs of the information technology training in the Internet era, and puts efforts to build a comprehensive curriculum that ranges from underlying system software to application layer and business applications. Today, the school is home to a software engineering laboratory, a broadband network and interactive multimedia laboratory, an e-commerce research center, an interactive graphics lab, a parallel processing institute, a cryptography and information security research lab, a public performance and information technology research center, a CC-CMM international standard research center, a data analysis and security laboratory, and other research labs.

The Fudan MSc in Software Engineering programme offers systematic training for students who want to start a career of engineers and managers in IT and Internet industry. The programme provides a series of specialized courses such as Formal Program Construction, Practical Software Development, Electronic Commerce, Advanced Database, Advanced Topics in Software Engineering, Requirements Engineering, and Distributed Computing. All the courses are taught in English by lecturers from Fudan and UCD.

University of College Dublin

Ireland is home to the world's top 10 technology companies. It is known as the Internet and Games Capital of Europe and is among the world's most technologically developed nations. There are excellent job opportunities, with 5,000 job vacancies in the sector at present.

The UCD MSc in Software Engineering is a uniquely flexible and innovative programme. It offers a negotiated learning (NL) model for students with an ICT background that allows students to customize their learning paths and to tailor what they learn to their own specific needs and career aspirations. Module choices include several programming languages, cloud computing, bioinformatics, data mining, machine learning and robotics.

Once accepted into the programme, students will be guided through a training needs assessment to establish their prior experience, personal knowledge gaps and career plans. The students have the option to select modules with a very specific thematic focus or they may select modules from one of the pre-defined thematic streams covered by the programme. The current module offerings can be explored by visiting <http://www.csi.ucd.ie/content/module-offerings>

Master Degree Programme of Fudan University - College of Software Engineering (UCD)

Fudan University and UCD wish to provide students with a joint programme allowing for credit transfers between Fudan and UCD contributing to the award of Masters Degree of Software Engineering from Fudan University, and Masters Degree of Software Engineering from UCD. Fudan and UCD have been working closely together for over 13 years providing an international dimension to education.

Programme Details

Study Period: two and a half years.

The joint programme consists of three parts:

One year of study at Fudan University to finish all the courses required for Fudan degree, which include at least 10 UCD-equivalent credits that are taught by UCD staff or approved by UCD, and will be accredited in Phase 2 by UCD;

One year of study at UCD to finish all the courses required for UCD degree;

Practical training experience at UCD is accredited by Fudan.

A half-year at either UCD or Fudan for the preparation and defense of a thesis for the Fudan degree.

Highlights

This joint programme will provide a systematic arrangement of specialized practice (industrial practice or academic practice) for each student. Each student is required to make a plan for practice arrangement in his/her first term in Fudan and complete the practice arrangement in the following periods at Fudan and UCD. An industrial practice arrangement includes an integrated internship in IT or Internet companies that have research and development centers in both Ireland and Shanghai. An academic practice arrangement includes one or more research or engineering projects that are co-advised by Fudan professors and UCD professors.

Courses

Degree courses	Professional elective courses
Formal Program Construction For UCD Lecturers	Advanced Topics in Software Engineering For UCD Lecturers
